A tired young man stood at the window of his room in his house on one of the uptown cross streets on Christmas afternoon, and looked at the windows in the big, long brown stone block on the other side of the street. He saw on the ledge of a third story window of the house directly opposite a bottle of champagne. It had evidently been placed there to get cool. On the ledge of a second story window of the same house he saw a photographic frame with a glass exposed to the light. Another ledge was the resting place of a pan filled with something which he could see was smoking hot. The young man owns a spy-glass, and looking through it at the smoking pan he concluded that the girls in that room across the way must have been making molasses candy on a gas stove and had put the stuff out to harden. Turning his spyglass to the window ledges of other houses on the block he

Lost in a Sewer.

Gustav Larson is employed by the city of Minneapolis in the sewer department. In company with two fellow workmen he proceeded to Twenty-seventh street and Tyndale avenue to make an inspection and clear the sewer of a jam which seemed to exist. He entered the sewer alone, his two companions remaining above ground to give help if necessary. The sewer at this point is sixty-six inches high. His companions figured out that they would not be needed and walked off. Without a light Larson lost his bearings, and his shouts for assistance brought no answer.

Finally Larson gave up shouting and endeavored vainly to find another manhole out of which he could crawl. There were plenty of them, but they were out of reach. After walking nearly two hours Larson noticed the passageway was growing smaller, and this gave him hope. Soon after he managed to find a manhole that he could reach, and by the aid of the sewer walls reached terra firma in an exhausted condition. The escape was made at Fourth street and Cedar avenue, about three miles from the place of entrance.-Cor. Chicago

Game Perishing in the North Woods. A gentleman who returned from the North Woods Saturday says that the has not fallen to a great depth among the mountains yet, but that the mercury has gone very low on several occasions, and has thus caused much suffering among the deer and other animals in the woods. He says that some of the young deer were frozen by the intense cold, and that lumbermen report that numbers of the smaller animals sought shelter in the logging camps. Last winter will be remembered as an especially favorable one to the animals in the woods and mountains, but this winter will be a very hard one for them.

The trappers are having good success in catching the various small fur bearing animals in large numbers, as the winter is so severe they are easily lured to the bait of the traps.—Utica Observer.

Awkward Occurrences on a Railroad. A few weeks ago the train on this division of the Meran-Bozen railway was obliged to come to halt for want of water for the engine, and the passengers had to turn out to help the trainmen bring enough water to render possible a completion of the journey. We omitted all mention of this occurrence in the hope that in the future similar inconveniences would be provided against. To our deep regret we are again in the disagreeable position to record such an occurrence, and we feel it our duty this time to lay a description of it before our readers. - Meran Zeitung.

Sketching in Parliament.

M. Mars, the well known French caricaturist, was in the house of commons Post-Office Block. the other evening. He was brought in by a brother caricaturist, Mr. Harry Furniss, but he expressed some surprise when he was informed that sketching in the strangers' gallery was forbidden. Nevertheiess he took one or two "thumbnails." In Paris M. Mars is permitted to prosecute his humor from a seat next to the premier of France. Honorable members will perhaps be amused to hear that M. Mars does not consider the house has much individuality in its members. -London Star.

Making Man Consumptive Proof. Dr. Koch's remarkable discovery has already been followed by a further step, which aims not so much at curing people who are afflicted with consumption as at preventing the growth of the disease in those who are healthy, just as Jenner introduced vaccination as a preventive against smallpox. This discovery has been made by Drs. Hericourt and Richet, pupils of M. Pasteur. Their experiments so far have been confined to rabbits, but they are confident of having found out the secret of making man consumptive proof.-London Tit-Bits.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending em to premature graves."
